Freddie Mole, Lion Tamer
By Alexander McCall Smith
J F Mcca 119 pages Realistic Fiction

Freddie Mole is smart, kind, a hard worker, and more than happy to help his parents make ends meet when times are tough. When he receives an unexpected invitation to join the circus and work for a good wage, Freddie is ecstatic. While he's happy to wash dishes and help keep things clean, will Freddie be able to handle the duties of a high-flying trapeze artist or a lion tamer when needed?

Finding Langston
By Lesa Cline-Ransome
J F Clin 107 Pages Historical Fiction

Langston, named after the poet Langston Hughes, has always lived in a segregated Alabama. When his mother dies and he moves to Chicago with his father, life isn't easy, but Langston discovers the world of the public library, which is open to all. It is here that he encounters his namesake, and the poetry that can help ease his loneliness. A neighbor, Miss Fulton, reads Hughes' poetry with Langston, giving him strength to face the grief he feels, and to stand up to the bullies at school who make life difficult.

The Spirit of Cattail County
By Victoria Piontek
J F Pion 275 pages Fantasy

Sparrow is an orphan who lives in a creepy old house in the swamp, and whose best friend is a ghost, which is probably why she doesn't have any actual living friends. Her life is decidedly lonely, and only gets worse when her hateful Auntie Geraldine comes to live with her and tries to sell her house! With the help of a kid psychic and two new friends, can Sparrow save her home, find her father, and set her best friend's spirit free?

The Mad Wolf's Daughter
By Diane Magras
J F Magr 280 pages Adventure

This is the story of a lass who became a legend. Drest must journey far to save her brothers and her father after their war-band is attacked by thieves. With Borawyn, her brother Wulfric's sword, she captures one of the family's kidnappers, demanding his life for that of one of her brothers. Chased all the way by a bandit seeking revenge, Drest, and the new friends she makes along her journey, cannot stop until they reach the castle where her family is being held. Will she be able to rescue all of them, and save her new friends and herself?
